WONG GAU'S MURDERER.

JOHN BUAYA, A NEGRO, HELD FOR THE CRIME.

The Prisoner Treats the Matter as a Joke and Thinks that Chinamen Cannot Identify Negroes—Ah Quong, Wong Gau's Partner, Is Positive that the Negro Killed the Man.

An inquest was held to-day on the body of Wong Gau or Ah Jim as he was called, the Chinese laundryman who was murdered last Thursday night at his home, No. 106 Hickory street. John Buaya, the negro arrested by Officer Donlon at 11th and Broadway, was held responsible for the death of the Chinaman. Buaya is 22 years of age and lives at the northwest corner of Tenth and Gratiot streets. He affected to take no interest in the matter, and endeavored to prove an alibi but did not succeed. He failed to produce any one who could vouch for him on the night of the murder. The murder being committed at 7:15 p. m. Buaya was arrested on a charge of carrying concealed weapons and another time for disturbing the peace and the police claim he is a very ugly negro. As he answered the description of the negro who killed Wong Gau Officer Donlon, who knew him, arrested him on suspicion of being the man and Ah Quong, Wong Gau's business partner, who was present with the laundryman, immediately identified Buaya as the murderer. As the Chinaman had been shown six other negroes who were arrested on the same night and none of them were the right parties, but immediately identified this man, the fact adds considerable weight to the charge.

The first witness heard at the inquest was Ah Quong. He testified that Wong Gau had just awoken Thursday evening at 7:15 o'clock when two negroes came to his laundry. One of the negroes asked him for a shirt. The Chinaman said he did not have one and the other asked him for a shirt. The Chinaman said he did not have one and the other asked him for a shirt. The Chinaman said he did not have one and the other asked him for a shirt.

Robert Scott, a negro, testified that about 7:30 p. m. he saw the prisoner and the Chinaman at the laundry. He testified that the prisoner was carrying a knife and that he saw the prisoner strike the Chinaman. He testified that the prisoner was carrying a knife and that he saw the prisoner strike the Chinaman.

None of the witnesses accounted for the prisoner when the murder was committed. The Chinaman had been killed until he went to the City Hall to register. He testified that he saw the prisoner strike the Chinaman. He testified that the prisoner was carrying a knife and that he saw the prisoner strike the Chinaman.

So vigorous were the pecks and the flogging of the snake that it was very much alarmed by the two parent birds.

DOINGS IN THE COURTS.

A BATCH OF OPINIONS HANDLED DOWN BY JUDGE WOERNER.

Interesting Decision as to the Guardianship of a Child Whose Parents Were of Different Religious Beliefs—His Judgment by Default—Other Judgments and Opinions—Bills Filed—Legal Notes.

Judge Woerner of the Probate Court was today called upon to decide who might most rightfully be entitled to the guardianship of a minor orphan, Katie Bamberg, aged 8 years, the brother of the girl's father, Louis P. Bamberg, or the mother, Mrs. Louise Bamberg. In an exhaustive written opinion, the judge has decided in favor of the mother, Mrs. Bamberg, and some interesting points are touched upon in the decision. Both applicants were deemed entirely worthy of the guardianship, but the decision hinged on other considerations, not the least important consideration being that the child is the pet of Mrs. Bamberg's household and looks upon Mrs. Bamberg as a mother. The father himself had before his death expressed the wish that the girl's interests be committed to the keeping of his brother, but no lack of confidence was expressed as to the desirability of Mrs. Bamberg as a guardian and no striking proof adduced that the custody of the child's person by the mother was meant, so that this argument advanced by Mr. Bamberg's counsel had little weight with the judge. "It is further objected," says Judge Woerner in his written opinion, "that Mrs. B. is of a religious persuasion different from that of the parents or of the surviving parent," and that section 576 of the revised statutes forbids the appointment of such "another suitable person can be procured." This objection presents a question of grave importance. It is the policy of Missouri to secure before the law the absolute equality of all forms of religious faith, and the section cited is held to have been enacted in view of the practice in some countries of seeking to strengthen the dominant faith by means of the compulsory custody of the young. "In other words," the purpose of the statute is, fortunately, not attributable to any person in any manner interested in this proceeding, and the parents themselves were of different faiths. But the terms of the statute are "or the surviving parent." Does this mean that the designation as applicable to only one of the two parents, to-wit: the one that survived the other, the law is intended to be construed to late surviving parent. It is obvious that if the latter construction is the true one, then the court is prohibited from appointing a guardian of different faith from that of the late father, because while his wife has been, like a Catholic, he was a Protestant. "It is evident that if the parents of a minor are both dead, one of whom had been a Catholic and the other a Protestant, the question of compulsory proselytism can have nothing to do with the preference of the parents themselves, for they were divided in their faith. Hence, so far as reference to the parents is concerned, the natural import of the clause is that it applies only in cases where one of the parties is still living.

And since there can be no subversion to proselytism in giving the custody of the child to a person of the same faith with one of the parents, where both are dead, it is evident that the statute intends no preference in such cases. It is in evidence, also, that the father himself not only placed the child in Mrs. Bamberg's custody, but requested her to have it baptized in the church of which his mother was a member and himself asked her and another Catholic lady to act as its sponsors.

A Ward's Money.

Judge Woerner overruled the motion made by the father of Mary O. Cuminsky, a minor, petitioning that the appropriation made by the court, upon the application of the minor's curator, for her education, support and maintenance be ordered paid to him, the father. The judge, in a written opinion, says: "It is necessary to bear in mind that the curator has given bond, conditioned for the faithful discharge of his duties according to law, while no such bond is required for the natural guardian. The father is entitled to the custody of his child upon principles of natural justice, recognized by statutory law. But when the child is possessed of an estate derived from the father, he is required to give bond and account as other guardians and curators. From this provision, it clearly appears that the father, not having given bond, is not authorized to receive his child's estate for any purpose. "There is nothing in the order as originally made touching upon the father's right to the custody, support and maintenance of the child's education. The statute in every respect not right to the custody and control of its person. Any necessary or proper expenditure ordered by him in this respect will constitute an obligation on the curator, the discharge of which may be enforced by the courts. The motion must be overruled for the reasons stated. The accounting required of guardians (Revised Statutes, section 580), for the application of all moneys expended for the education, support and maintenance of their wards could not be superintended in any court if the allowance were ordered to be paid to the father."

Judgment Against an Estate.

In passing judgment upon the claim of Thos. Wright against the estate of Robert Flavin, deceased, Judge Woerner handed down a written opinion. The plaintiff in the lifetime of Flavin recovered judgment against him for $470.50 and presented the same against the administrator for classification. The defense offered the proof that subsequently the deceased offered several promissory notes and delivered them to the plaintiff, aggregating in amount the amount of the judgment against him, for which the claimant gave receipts, agreeing thereon not to press the judgment, but to take the notes in lieu thereof. Two of the notes were paid, but default was made as to the others, some of them having matured during the maker's life time. It was claimed for the defense that the making and delivery of the notes constituted a satisfaction of the judgment, but Judge Woerner held that the notes were a novation, and that the plaintiff was entitled to be placed in the fourth class, deducting from the same the amount of such notes as have been paid upon surrender of those remaining unpaid.

Judgment by Default.

In the case of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. against the Cotton Exchange Real Estate Co. before Judge Dillon, there was default and final judgment for plaintiff on each of seventy-five counts for $478.75, aggregating $35,406.25. The printed petition, which was filed on April 10, 1888, by the plaintiff, stated that on April 10, 1888, the defendant executed an instrument by which was

REAL ESTATE.

Sunday's Propitious Weather Argues Well for the Week.

Thousands of people availed themselves of the fine weather yesterday for an outing in the suburbs. Lindell avenue and all the popular drives were crowded with vehicles during the whole afternoon, and pedestrians, too, were quite fashionable with parties who own chaises as well as those who do not. The clear, breezy air acted as an incentive to gentle exercises, affording a splendid opportunity to give property a close inspection. Taken all through it was a close parade day for real estate and it stood the inspection well. Every section of the residence portion, from Carondelet northward to Forest Park, and all along the boulevards between there and Grand avenue: Tyler, Dundee and Robert places in the vicinity of Tower Grove Park; the Griseville street, Cabanne place and Chamberlain Park; Clemons, Hamilton and Horton places, adjacent to the Narrow Gauge, and property from there to the northern city limits proved to be drawing attractions for home-seekers, investors and speculators. It was just such a Sunday as the real estate agent delights to have. People can get out and read his signboards and see what there is for sale.
